Application Maintenance Services

Many organizations are challenged with managing tight budgets while looking for ways to reduce costs, improve productivity and increase revenues. IT departments in turn, are tasked to build and refine core business applications which often include supporting a mix of non-core and legacy applications, many of which are highly specialized. Add the increasing volumes of routine tasks and maintaining these environments can become particularly challenging from a resource and staffing perspective. This can quickly overwhelm even the most seasoned IT professional.

If this sounds familiar, then consider leveraging Fusepoint's Application Services team to add some "bench strength" to your IT operation. At Fusepoint, we have a unique approach to application outsourcing. In addition to custom development of new applications, Fusepoint also offers a suite of Maintenance Services designed to provide continuous support, enhancement and maintenance of existing applications that need it. You gain access to an experienced team of high caliber people with diverse technical skills who can help augment your IT staff. At Fusepoint, our approach to outsourcing starts with taking time to fully understand the detail of your requirements and existing processes, allowing a smooth transition of your applications to our team, for as long as needed. We assume responsibility of your selected applications which in turn lets you focus on other priorities.

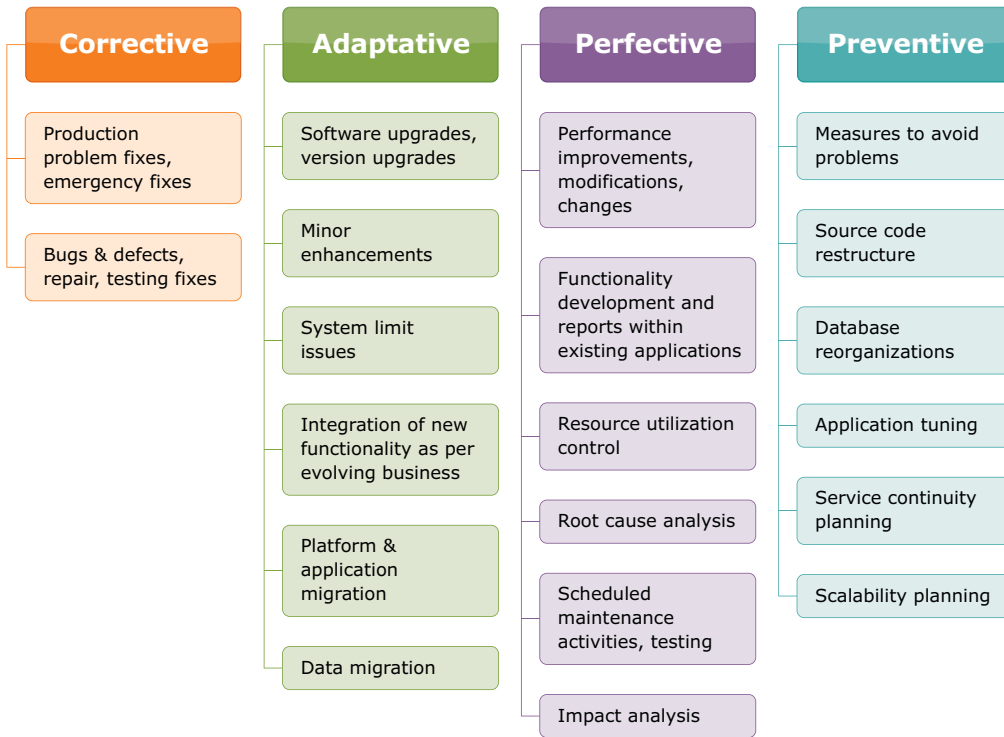

Sound familiar?

- You want to introduce new technologies without losing the knowledge and integrity of your legacy systems
- There is a backlog of fixes and upgrades on non-core applications that need attention
- You need access to specific skill-sets you don't have in-house
- There is a looming deadline with limited IT resources available
- You need help extending the lifecycle of your application
- Knowledge is lost with turnover of IT staff
